

Cross. He had just come off the train from Scotland having been out in the mountains testing some new gear. He must have been about 70 years old then.

The national newspapers have carried lengthy articles and obituaries about Chris's life and achievements many of national importance. Reference to his involvement with Reebok is fairly brief and his contribution and loyalty to Lancaster go without mention. I am grateful for the excitement, enthusiasm, inspiration and sense of achievement that he brought into my life but also a bit betrayed that he was after all mortal!
